LIME HOLLOW PAVES THE WAY FOR INCLUSIVE OUTDOOR ADVENTURES

Picture this: a rugged trail winding through the lush woods, the chatter of birds above and the rustle of leaves beneath your feet. Now, imagine experiencing this bliss even if mobility challenges are a part of your story. Thanks to Lime Hollow Nature Center's innovative spirit, coupled with a community's unwavering commitment to accessibility, the Cortland County nature center has been a game-changer in the world of nature exploration.

In 1996, Charles Yapple envisioned the Trail for All project, aiming to break barriers in nature exploration. Guided by the passionate Glenn Reisweber, who carried the torch as the executive director, this initiative evolved into a movement with the goal of ensuring that all, regardless of physical abilities, could experience Lime Hollow's wonders.

In 2009, after three years of steadfast dedication, a 1/3-mile wheelchair-accessible trail materialized—a collaborative effort by dedicated community volunteers. Eagle Scouts crafted bridges and a wheelchair-accessible stream overlook; the Dryden Rotary Club, with a generous donation from Bestway Lumber's, built an accessible Gracie Pond overlook. The Cortland Career Works Program and SUNY Cortland students moved 140 tons of sand by hand over two summers to transform the mulch trail into a robust, wheelchair-accessible surface. Guiding this effort was Fran Pizzola, a force from Cortland County Access to Independence, who served as the center's consultant and took an honorary wheelchair ride on launch day.

Fifteen years later, Lime Hollow continues to champion inclusivity under the leadership of executive director Ilya Schmulenson. In 2023, the nature center became one of two in the state equipped with an Action TrackChair®, a battery-powered, all-terrain "wheelchair". Further plans include regrading, rerouting and resurfacing specific trails, expanding the Accessible Trail from 1/3 mile to three miles through the renowned Art Meadow and connecting it to the Lehigh Valley railroad trail. Rest points, repairs to existing bridges and directional signage installations are also in the pipeline, guided by insights from Cornell University's Design Connect program and SUNY Cortland's outdoor recreation internship program. Thanks to backing from the Central NY Community Foundation, Guthrie, Christopher & Dana Reeve Foundation, JM Murray Foundation, Nicholas & Agnes Renzi Charitable Fund, Plan First Technologies, and the Siegle Foundation, Lime Hollow continues its transformative journey toward universal outdoor access.

This journey has been a testament to the spirit of a united community, fueled by a shared passion for nature. The Trail for All transcends being merely a Lime Hollow Nature Center endeavor; it has evolved into a community-driven initiative, embodying the collaborative commitment to universal outdoor accessibility and the enduring love for the great outdoors.

OUTDOORS

Paddling Playgrounds

Take the less traditional route to explore Cortland County from the water! There's nothing quite as thrilling (and relaxing) as paddling. Grab your life vest and a kayak and head out to explore the open water!

TIOUGHNIOGA RIVER

The Tioughnioga (pronounced Ty-off-nee-o-ga) is a 34.2-mile-long tributary of the Chenango River. It is comprised of two branches. The East Branch begins in Madison County, while the West Branch issues from Tully Lake, and both meander into Cortland County, mainly through agricultural lands, until they combine in the City of Cortland to form the Tioughnioga River. This narrow waterway features twists, turns and easily navigated rapids for an engaging paddle, often running parallel to roads. Wildlife sightings, including bald eagles, are common, and there are four miles of Public Fishing Rights along the river.

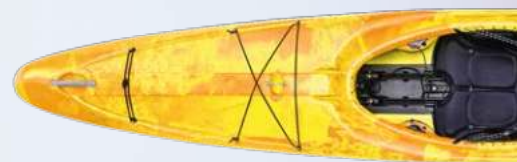

LITTLE YORK LAKE

Nestled in the Preble hamlet within Dwyer Memorial Park, Little York Lake is an easily navigated, 1.1-mile-long waterway. It stands apart as one of the more serene kayaking destinations in Cortland, with a backdrop of rolling hills and a shoreline dotted with homes and the historic Little York Pavilion. Bring binoculars to spy on the abundance of wildlife or cast a line to take advantage of the diverse fishery. Perfect for laid-back paddlers who believe the journey and destination go hand in hand. Extend the kayaking fun by heading north to charming Green Lake or east to Goodale Lake, both reachable through a narrow waterway.

SKANEATELES LAKE (SOUTH END)

Skaneateles Lake is the fifth largest of the Finger Lakes, and you can easily access it from the south end via the Andrew R. Fuller Park launch in the town of Scott ($3 fee). This lake offers one of Cortland's most beautiful paddling experiences, framed by wooded hills and steep hillsides.

Admire charming bathhouses and cottages along the sparkling blue-green waters. Keep paddling north just beyond the county lines to reach one of New York's premier paleontological sites, the Staghorn Cliffs. Optimal paddling times are early morning or evening, avoiding boat traffic and wind.

THE SOUTH END OF PARADISE

Nestled on Skaneateles Lake's southern shore, The Glen Haven is a water lover's dream. The inn and restaurant is located a stone's throw away from Andrew R. Fuller Park for a quick launch spot for your water adventures. Post-lake exploration, grab a hearty bite on the patio—the smoked wings or Glen Haven Bison Burger are top picks. Cap off the day with a cocktail to-go, and relax by the shoreline while catching the sunset. No need to venture far for a good night's sleep; stay upstairs in the 4-bedroom space for a hassle-free snooze.

Get into the Swing of Things!

Cortland County's five 18-hole public courses—all within a half-hour or less drive from one another—offer opportunities for every golfer, from first-time putters to world-class champions looking to work on their swing. Human Hair Wreath

There are wreaths, and then there is this wreath, proudly displayed at the 1890 House Museum parlor. Each delicate flower is carefully woven with a unique fiber-human hair. Memento moris were all the rage at the height of the Victorian era. Traditionally handmade by the women of the household, it could include hair from many family members, both living and deceased. Book a tour of this Victorian mansion to determine for yourself just how many tresses are eternally entangled.

Ox Shoe

Did you know that in the early 19th century, oxen, like their counterpart the horse, once wore shoes? Unlike horses, shoeing an ox was a tremendous undertaking! Unable to stand on just three legs, massive stocks were built to keep the lumbering beast from collapsing during the farriering. Because of this, very few ox shoes were made, and as beasts of burden were replaced with machinery, very few of these artifacts remained. Lucky for you, this unusual shoe is on display at Cortland Country Music Park.

New York Central College Cemetery

While the tremendous history of New York Central College in McGraw could never be forgotten, its tiny student cemetery nearly was. Despite the progressive college's initial success, in 1860, plagued by growing social and political opposition and a smallpox outbreak, the college would succumb to bankruptcy and close. Over time its small student cemetery was swallowed by the surrounding forest. Rediscovered by a curious history teacher more than 100 years later, the New York Central College Cemetery now hosts a self-guided walking tour, where you too can discover its history in this nearly forgotten cemetery.

Mysterious Mask

The Suggett House Museum at the Cortland County Historical Society is brimming with Cortland County's history on display. But what do you do when an artifact's history is a mystery? Carved from a solid block of wood by Charles Torrey of McGraw (1867-1951), this curious mask was donated to the historical society in 1976 by Mrs. Mary Torrey. The following year it was loaned to Colgate University's Parker Galley for a temporary exhibit before returning to the archives. When the current historians rediscovered this unusual artifact, it was quickly discovered why it might have remained in storage for so long. No matter where you are in the room, its hollow eyes seem to follow you. Reminiscent of a death mask, its inspiration or even the date of creation is unknown. Did Mary Torrey donate the mask, simply to be rid of this haunting visage?

Memorial Boulder

It's not often you discover a massive boulder serving as a gravestone in a cemetery. However, Cortland Rural Cemetery is, in itself, most unusual. In 2015, the 150-year-old cemetery officially became an open-air museum with the installation of a "cemetrail", a self-guided 20-stop tour covering the history, geology and art within this 44-acre burial ground. One of our favorite stops is the colossal boulder, honoring the Jewett family. This style of marker became popular within the naturalist movement in the Victorian Era. Arising from the romantic movement of the late 18th and early 19th centuries, naturalists were drawn to the outdoors, collecting rare plant specimens, rocks and minerals and taxidermy. It is believed that this raw, unpolished boulder reflects that movement.

The prodigal humorist returns

Cortland native Paul Kozlowski has returned from his travels as the prodigal humorist and created the Ake Gallery, one of Central New York's premiere art venues. Since 2022, local talent has filled the gallery's stage and walls with native Central New York creatives like comedian and actor Bobcat Goldthwait and Peter Hannan (creator of the Nickelodeon series CatDog). Paul's original artwork, displayed in collections owned by Sarah Silverman, Robin Williams, Bill Maher and at The Cartoon Network, has found a new home in the Ake Gallery in the historic Crescent Commons.

We sat down with one of Cortland County's most infamous charters for a quirky Q&A.

QUESTION

It's so great to have you back in, Paul! You're a real gem in Cortland's crown. What took you to L.A., and what brought you back to your hometown?

ANSWER

I was writing for The Chris Rock Show in NYC and got a job in LA as the sidekick for Fox Sports Ultimate Fan League. I know as much about sports as I do about art. I opened an art gallery and performance venue in LA for 14 years, then my parent's health started to fall, plus I had a pack of stray dogs, so I figured I'd spend some time back in Cortland.

The fine art scene can sometimes be viewed as aloof or pretentious. Yet, your work is the exact opposite of that. Its cheeky humor and sarcasm make it universally approachable. What inspires your subject matter and use of such eclectic mediums?

I just try to make stuff that I would hang up on my own walls.

The Ake Gallery serves as so much more than walls for showcasing art. You host open mic nights, music, stand-up acts, old movie screenings and even a film festival. Was that always your vision for the space?

I started performing standup comedy right out of high school. Later, in New York City, I started to put together shows in these fantastic obscure little theaters. Most of these venues never put much thought into making their own spaces creative. For years I wanted to build my own funhouse/Batcave that was as wild as the performances that were showcased. I finally got my chance in Los Angeles. I never thought I could pull the same thing off in Cortland, but to my surprise, the community support has been amazing.

The 2023 Duck and Red Octopus Short Funny Stop-Action and Animated Film Festival, by all accounts, was a smashing success. Is there a repeat on the horizon?

Unbelievably, yes. I can't believe we pulled it off. Everybody involved is looking forward to next year.

Speaking of future endeavors, what project are you currently working on that you're most excited about?

I'm continuing to fill the gallery up with fun stuff for people to buy. During COVID I started doing a kid's show on YouTube starring Larry Woodchuckski in Larry's Wild Life. I'm going to kick that back into gear. It should be a lot easier shooting in a heated studio and not in the woods wearing a woodchuck costume during hunting season. We're also continuing to put on some amazing live shows.

We've all heard the expression starving artist. While I recognize it isn't about actual hunger, readers want to know, what is the best place in Cortland County for a hungry artist to eat?

It IS about actual hunger! I am a foodie, and I miss eating food that doesn't have cheese on it, but that is a small price to pay to be back in CNY. I love the beet salad at The Community, the riggies at the Green Arch and hanging out at The Hollywood watching all the movie stars eat pizza.

Curtains Up! Cortland Repertory Theatre

Over the last 52 years, Cortland Repertory Theatre, widely known as CRT, has become part of the heart and soul of Cortland County. As one of New York State's showbiz veterans, CRT welcomes both locals and travelers each year into two unique theaters hosting a variety of productions such as mainstage plays, musicals, stand up comedy and so much more.

For over five decades, Cortland Repertory Theatre (CRT) has been the beating heart of Cortland County's cultural scene. As one of New York State's showbiz veterans, CRT draws in locals and visitors to their two distinctive theaters with a diverse lineup of plays, musicals, live music, and so much more.

It all began in 1972 at the quaint Little York Pavilion in Dwyer Memorial Park with "Fiddler on the Roof," marking the start of CRT's journey from a former snack bar to a beloved theater destination. Over the years, the summer lineup has expanded to include three musicals and three non-musicals, a testament to the theater's evolution. Beyond the performances, CRT has been a breeding ground for talent, nurturing stars like Oscar-winner Holly Hunter and Tony-winning director Joe Mantello.

In 2015, CRT further expanded its reach with a downtown Cortland venue, converting a 1930s car dealership into a black box/cabaret hub for various events, including stand-up comedy, concerts, cabaret nights and community dances.

BONUS

The Whiting Theatre at the Center for the Arts serves as a venue for live theater productions presented by the Center Players. The Ruth E. Dowd Fine Arts Center Theatre at SUNY Cortland is a hub for SUNY's cultural events, including theatrical performances and musical showcases.

With nearly 300 shows to its name, CRT promises unforgettable experiences that'll have you on the edge of your seat or dancing in the aisles—because at CRT, stories come alive in ways that'll keep you hooked.

ROSE HALL

It's not every day that a musician has the opportunity to lay down tracks beneath stained glass windows or perform live in a more than 100-year-old cathedral. Breaking barriers and bridging the gap between tradition and innovation, art and architecture collide in perfect harmony at Rose Hall.

Founded in 2018 by the Dan & Rose McNeil Foundation, Rose Hall was conceptualized as a space where local, regional and national acts could perform, stream and record their music. Today, Rose Hall boasts a recording studio, video streaming hub, three control rooms, and a tracking room, as well as a 500-seat main stage and intimate 90-person listening room. Every detail in the former church has been thoughtfully designed to curate a unique experience, from spectacular light shows for bombastic rock concerts to candlelit singer/songwriter sessions in the listening lounge.

From rock shows to orchestral performances, the wide gamut of genres sharing the stage at Rose Hall means there is something for everyone's taste. Whether you want to bask in the melodic melodies of a legend or discover an up-and-coming talent.

CENTER FOR THE ARTS OF HOMER

More than 130 years ago, The First Baptist Church of Homer was erected on the corner of Cayuga and South Main, and while it's no longer a church, this historic space has transformed into an artistic sanctuary. From intricate stained-glass windows to the electrifying beats of rock and roll, this church-turned-concert hall is a masterpiece blending art and music.

In June 2005, the Center for the Arts swung open its massive doors, hosting its first-ever concert featuring the Celtic rock sensation, the Glengarry Bhoys. Since then, hundreds of performers have graced the stage, playing to sold-out crowds, including the likes of Grace Potter, Henry Rollins, Ani DiFranco, David Sedaris and Macy Gray. And, with only 400 seats in the soaring cathedral, there is never a bad seat in the house.

So much more than just a music venue, the Center for the Arts is home to an art gallery, business incubators, creative workshops and studio spaces, as well as providing a stage for local movie premiers and plays. This is a must-stop spot for art and music lovers traveling through Cortland County.

Step into the rhythm of nostalgia.

Aerosmith, The Grateful Dead, Simon & Garfunkel, The Beach Boys—this roster reads like a who's who of music legends from the past 50 years. Yet, it merely scratches the surface of the countless musical acts that graced the SUNY Cortland stage. Explore SUNY Cortland's "golden era" of campus concerts through the Musical Legacy Commemorative Project. Shadowboxes mounted in the basement of Corey Union are packed with ticket stubs, newspaper articles, concert posters and 45 RPM records documenting performances between 1960 and 1990, including James Taylor, The Eagles and Cheap Trick. Backyard Beats

Long before written language, songs held the history of humanity. From drum circles to ballads, music brought people together, often uniting cultures and ideas across generations. Cortland County has kept this tradition alive with home-grown annual music festivals. Created to help carve out a space to cultivate community in an ever-more disconnected world, Cortland County invites you to share in these grassroots festivals.

PORCHFEST CORTLAND

Ain't no party like a Porchfest party! In 2015, thanks to musically minded local artist Molly Reagan, porches became stages, lawns became venues and strangers became friends at the first-ever Cortland Porchfest. What began as a small gathering of friends and neighbors grew into an annual event attracting over 5000 visitors, with a parade, crafts and games, delicious eats and lots of live music. Featuring more than 30 live performances spanning folk to rock, and bagpipes to banjos, the diverse lineup captivates everyone throughout the day. The merch booth, staffed by incredible volunteers from the Cortland High School Student Council, boasts a line the length of Van Hoesen Street, as Molly's cheerful merch has gathered a bit of a cult following. August 2024 marks the 9th Annual Cortland Porchfest, rain or shine. So, strap on your dancing shoes and get ready for some front porch pickin', it's going to be a beautiful day in the neighborhood.

SEEDSTOCK MUSIC FESTIVAL

Nestled in the hills above downtown Cortland, within a century-old working farm, lies a picturesque natural amphitheater. Since 2008, this has been the home of Seedstock—once a house party featuring a handful of local bands and a couple hundred friends, now a unique, family-friendly overnight festival. Seedstock keeps the tunes going non-stop across two stages, featuring over a dozen local, regional and nationally touring bands spanning acoustic, bluegrass, rock, folk and funk. The Main Stage rests at the foot of the historic farmhouse, while the Forest Stage, reached through a wooded trail, is nestled between looming art sculptures and illuminated by a kaleidoscopic light show. Festival-goers stake out spots with hammocks, blankets and coolers on the lawn, while camping atop a knoll offers a night of dancing under the stars. Don't miss the quintessential Cortland County festival on the farm!

Culinary Time Capsules

Check out these three historic eateries in Cortland County, serving up nostalgia alongside delicious dishes. They're a must for any foodie's list!

GREEN ARCH RESTAURANT

In 1930, Italian immigrant Francesca Discenza kickstarted her entrepreneurial journey, starting with a grocery store in the now Green Arch. The Elm Street business secretly doubled as the East End's only speakeasy during Prohibition, earning Francesca a citation for serving booze undercover. Over the years, it morphed into a lively dance hall that once hosted the legendary Louis Armstrong and served Francesca's delicious tomato pie, the first to do so in Cortland. Now run by family friend Matt Petrella, this historic spot still serves classic Italian dishes and its famous homemade "Arch Sauce" – and, of course, the beloved Old Fashioned.

COMMUNITY RESTAURANT

The Community Restaurant has been a culinary cornerstone in downtown Cortland since its humble beginnings as the Community Coffee Shop in the early 20th century. It shifted gears to the Community Grill in 1930, ultimately finding its identity in 1963 when the Souzas family took the reins. Today, Evan Souzas proudly continues the legacy, specializing in hearty Greek comfort dishes, with a nod to some American and Italian fare. It boasts CNY's largest bourbon collection and the beloved seasonal favorite, the Tom & Jerry.

Eat around the world!

Lofongo at La Bamba

Chicken stuffed with mofongo (smashed plantain and garlic). Pair it with a side of yuca and vegetables.

Chicken Chile Relleno at Los Lagos

Chile relleno with pulled chicken and chipotle sauce. Served with rice and guacamole salad.

The Shishtawooc at Pita Gourmet

Marinated char-broiled skewer of chicken served with rice and a traditional salad or soup.

Mama's Spags and Balls at Rex's Pasta

Angel hair pasta with homemade meatballs lathered in their homemade house tomato sauce.

Tonkotsu Ramen at Yori House

Fresh ramen noodles topped with boiled egg, green onions, and fresh bean sprouts with rich, savory bone broth topped with chashu (sliced pork belly)

MELODYLAND

Established in 1932, Melodyland has the distinction of being the oldest family-run restaurant in Cortland County. From its pizza parlor origins, it's passed down through generations, now run by Maria Reitano and her daughter, Lisa. Today, locals flock for classic dishes like homemade spaghetti and ravioli, all served with a side of tradition. With a full bar sans fruity drinks and unique salad dressing options—Italian, Italian or Italian—Melodyland stays true to its roots. Pro tip: Cash or check only; no credit cards accepted.

Sando Showdown!

The Best Handhelds in Town

Get ready to embark on a flavor-packed journey as we unveil the sandwich secrets of Cortland County! From towering classics to offbeat delights, this list spills the beans (and condiments) on the local sammie sensations.

DOUG'S FISH FRY

Must-try: This staple doesn't mess around when it comes to fried fish. The fresh fish is breaded, fried and served skinless atop a seeded bun that covers maybe a third of the large filet. Add tartar sauce for an extra kick.

GORGERS CORTLAND

Must-try: Here, the sandwiches are served on housemade bread including the banh mi, loaded with shredded beef or pork belly, along with mayo, cucumbers, pickled carrots, sriracha, hoisin and cilantro.

NEW YORK BAGEL

Must-try: Peruse the menu above the deli counter to find your perfect sandwich, although it's worth shouting out the Kickin' Chicken, with lettuce, avocado, salsa, chipotle mayo and cheddar.

M&D DELI

Must-try: Great choices include the Garlic Beef Grinder and The Turkey Italiano, but one standout for its simplicity and excellence is the Classic Reuben, generously stuffed with corned beef, sauerkraut, Swiss Cheese & Russian Dressing on Rye (pictured below).

PONTILLO'S

Must-try: Is there anything better than Italian meatballs in tomato sauce with melted mozzarella? We'll wait. Try this classic, the Meatball Parmigiana, in your choice of a white or wheat toasted roll.

TRUXTON OUTPOST

Must-try: Five ingredients are all that's needed to make this supremely satisfying sandwich that strikes the best balance of salty and sweet. Meet The McGraw—ham, brushfire bacon and Swiss cheese drizzled with honey.

NICKY C'S

Must-try: If you're only going to try one sandwich, make it the Chicken Panuozzi, with marinated chicken, fontina cheese, pesto, arugula and Vinny's Italian hot pepper spread on focaccia, which makes it easy to bite into, but not too mushy.

QUEEN SUBS

Must-try: Your end-of-week lunch should be a giant Taco Sub smothered in sour cream, taco seasoned meatballs, your choice of veggies and topped with crushed Doritos.
